FIRST RED CROSS TROLLEY HOSPITAL COMPLETED

The first trolley hospital is completed and should serve as a model to those that will undoubtedly be used in many cities for the moving of wounded soldiers from ports of arrival to neighboring hospitals. It was designed by Superintendent John Lindell of the Boston Elevated railroad at the suggestion of Brig. Gen. John A. Johnston, commandant of the Northwestern department.

NOVEL VIEW OF SKYSCRAPER

This is not an Egyptian obelisk but a worm's eye-view of New York's latest skyscraper—the Bush Terminal, on Forty-second street near Broadway. It is 450 feet high and has 30 stories. The effect produced in this photograph was created by placing the camera on the sidewalk and pointing it toward the top of the building.

Dwarf Elephants.

And so travelers' tales are, after all, true; dwarf elephants do exist in mysterious Africa. It had been reported over and over again, and as often discredited by the learned as a mere natives' tale. But now, in London, the remains of two of the pygmy elephants of the Congo are to be seen, and naturalists will have to revise their theories. Seven years ago an expedition was sent out by the Paris Museum of Natural History to endeavor to learn something definite about the reputed aquatic elephants. A herd was seen, but the animals vanished so rapidly into the waters of Lake Leopold II that no report could be made of them, and once more the story was scouted. Even in the absorption of war this disclosure of a fragment of the unknown is curiously interesting. Will Africa never cease to yield up things "monstrous and new?" Flaubert would now have something to add to the wealth of Africa, "ostriches, giraffes, hippopotami, negroes and powdered gold," which he so delighted in.—Christian Science Monitor.

Temperance Notes

CLEANING THE MEDICINE CLOSET
The medical temperance department of the National W. C. T. U. has been no small factor in cleaning Uncle Sam's medicine closet. The superintendent of this department, Mrs. Martin M. Allen of New York, thus describes the process:

"When we started in to clean the medicine chest of the great United States, the chest was a dreadful sight. Whisky, port wine, sherry wine, beer to give strength, brandy and gin for certain ailments all stood in proud array on prominent shelves. To attempt to clean up such a medicine chest was a task sufficient to appall stout hearts. But a few brave souls said the task should be done, and gradually, surely, the cleaning has been going on. Some of the best physicians of the country aided in the task. Soon the whisky bottle for the consumptive was thrown away, then the brandy for the typhoid fever patient. Beer and wine were swept off the shelf by the aid of athletes who had proved that these drinks weaken instead of giving strength. Whisky for pneumonia was the next to go, and finally the American Medical association swept off the last remaining bottle of alcohol as unnecessary in the treatment of any disease."

GENERAL PERSHING ON PROHIBITION.

In an address before the National W. C. T. U. convention, Dr. Anna Howard Shaw gave direct testimony as to the attitude of General Pershing on prohibition. "I had the pleasure of meeting this great hero last spring in San Antonio, Texas," she said. "The citizens gave me a banquet, and among the honored guests was General Pershing. When he was called on for a toast, the great leader of the army stood up and pronounced himself a confirmed believer in the enfranchisement of women and in prohibition. After he had taken his seat and the program had been concluded, General Pershing was told by some of his Texas friends, 'Prohibition is an unpopular subject in Texas. We are not in favor of it.' The general replied, 'So long as I am at the head of the army I shall speak of prohibition.' But go slow in this matter," they said. General Pershing responded, 'I shall not go slow on prohibition, for I know what is the greatest foe to my men, greater even than the bullets of the enemy.'"

BRIEF AGAINST LIQUOR.

A speech club of Cincinnati recently put out the following "brief":
The law says:—That the liquor traffic has "no inherent right" to exist.
The courts:—That drink is largely the cause of crime and pauperism.
Physicians:—That drink is the chief cause of disease.
Business:—That drink produces incompetency and inefficiency.
The home:—That drink destroys happiness and prosperity.
The school:—That drink is the greatest enemy of education.
The church:—That drink is the chief foe to religion.
Motherhood:—That drink poisons the very fountains of life.
Economy:—That drink wastes food and robs labor.
Conservation:—That drink is always destructive, never constructive.
Patriotism:—That drink has disqualified a large percentage of the young men called to the colors, and, as Gen. Leonard Wood says, "is the soldier's worst enemy."

THE CIVILIAN ARMY AS IMPORTANT AS THE SOLDIER ARMY.

The sale of liquor to the soldier in training in the United States has been forbidden, so that he may be strong, alert, steady-handed, always ready, working with esprit de corps. At every essential point there is exactly the same reason for abstinence from liquor by the civilian. The men who mine coal, make munitions, cloth, uniforms, shoes, ships, run trains and steamers, or supervise any aspect of business life are just as much a part of the war machinery as the soldier. The scientifically demonstrated effects of alcohol are not peculiar to the soldier. Most of these results, in fact, have been secured in tests on civilians.

PROHIBITION A PART OF GREAT PLAN.

Slowly, steadily, undeterred and unfrightened, the movement upon the strongholds of John Barleycorn has gone forward. To call it a wave of prohibition is a weak figure. It has been more like one of those inexorable changes which group under evolution. There has been no more staying it than holding back the grinding, unhurrying and unsatisfied forces of erosion.—Detroit (Mich.) Journal.

WHAT JEFFERSON SAID.

The habit of using ardent spirits by men in office has occasioned more injury to the public and more trouble to me than all other sources. And were I to commence my administration again, the first question I would ask respecting a candidate for office would be, "Does he use ardent spirits?"—Thomas Jefferson.

Alcohol, by diminishing the moral and material strength of the army, is a crime against national defense in the face of the enemy.—General Joffre.

Paraffin for Stain.

Any kind of stain on a white tablecloth may be removed by rubbing with just a little paraffin before sending it to wash. If this is done the stain will come out in the boiling.
